- Title: This is England (2006)
- Drama film
- Director: Shane Meadows
- Synopsis (Wikipedia): http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/This\_Is\_England
The film begins in July 1983, with Shaun (Thomas Turgoose), a 12-year-old, getting in a fight at school after someone makes an offensive joke about his father who died in the Falklands War. On his way home, in an unhappy mood, Shaun runs into a group of skinheads led by Woody (Joe Gilgun), who feels sympathy for Shaun. The group eventually accepts Shaun as a member, and he develops a romance with Smell (Rosamund Hanson), an older girl who dresses in a punk/new wave style.

Combo (Stephen Graham), an older skinhead, returns to the group after serving a prison sentence. He attempts to enforce his leadership on the group and promote his white nationalist views. Combo causes the group to split in two, and Shaun decides to stay in Combo's racist group instead of leaving with the non-political skinheads led by Woody. One night, after Combo smokes cannabis that he bought from Milky (the only black skinhead from Woody's group), Combo snaps and beats Milky unconscious during an argument. Almost killing Milky, Combo shows panic and remorse, and begs Shaun to help him get Milky to the hospital.

The fate of Combo and the skinheads is not shown after this, but the final scene, in which Shaun throws his St George Cross (a gift from Combo) into the sea, implies that he has severed his ties with Combo and the white nationalist movement.
